

OSO LIBRE

A note from the Winemaker:

As the new year begins, so do the preparations for our largest bottling of the year and the start of the aging process for our 2024 vintage. For some reason I always get lured into the trap that I will take a break after the holidays, but as soon as January arrives, I am reminded of how busy this time of year can be at the winery. The cellar is hard at work topping up and preparing our newest vintage for aging, all while planning our early Spring bottling. This is when most of our more robust wines with the greatest aging potential are bottled. Some of our favorites like Quixotic, Querida, and Por Vida all come together at this time. Bottling is not the end of these wines' journey, but only a waypoint in their travels to their ultimate destination; your wine glass.

The next time that you raise a glass of your favorite Oso Libre wine, please pause for just a brief second to reflect on the story that the wine has to tell. The characteristics formed during the winemaking journey often bring you back to a place in time in the not-so-distant past. Forming these memories is what winemaking is all about.

Cheers!
